Chapter 1 by NotPhantom

if you didn't notice, this is all lowercase. it has to be. it's in the rules of the game. what game you ask? the technical name is the deadly game of cards. everyone just calls it the game.

it's definitely deadly too. last week there were 17 deaths alone because they broke the rules. 2 people died today, not because they broke the rules, but because they got out. you do not want to get out.

anyways, today is day 89085 of the game. every day there is a new challenge. today's is building a house of cards. seems simple, but it's not. there are added challenges, like all the cards are made of different things like sand, glass, cookie, and rubber. you also have to make the house as accurate as possible to the one you live in. (the homeless usually excel at this)

speaker blares "let the game begin!"

i opened my box, i could only use cards that were made out of glass or fabric. just great. I ran to the supply table and picked out a few dozen boxes of the given material. i had to build it right in front of my house, which would be hard because the ground around my house is uneven. i dug up the ground so that i could have a slightly flat surface to build on. i forgot to mention, if you can manage to get someone out, then you're closer to winning. these people were sick and all they wanted was for you to go to extreme lengths to survive. i managed to stack the glass up, the hard part was the roof. i picked the cards up and leaned them each slowly against each other, when it was finished i covered them with a fabric card. i had build my house entirely out of spades, and i had done it purposely. i stayed up all night keeping watch and protecting my house. i had drifted off at around midnight and when i woke up there was a letter in my hand, as usual. it notified me about the next challenge, yet all it said was: if you go inside you are out. later that day they turned on the speakers.

"the ground is lava!"

Chapter 3 by Evvy

ahhhhhh! pain, so much pain! why is lava so hot?
